Методические рекомендации по организации самостоятельной работы студентов

Самостоятельная работа проводится с целью углубления знаний по дисциплине и предусматривает:

- изучение отдельных разделов тем дисциплины
- чтение студентами рекомендованной литературы и усвоение теоретического материала дисциплины;
- подготовку к практическим занятиям;
- работу с Интернет-источниками;
- выполнение домашних работ;
- подготовку к различным формам контроля.

Программой дисциплины предусмотрено написание промежуточных тестов, итоговое тестирование.

Планирование времени на самостоятельную работу, необходимого на изучение настоящей дисциплины, студентам лучше всего осуществлять на весь семестр, предусматривая при этом регулярное повторение пройденного материала. Материал, законспектированный на практических занятиях, необходимо регулярно дополнять сведениями из литературных источников, представленных в рабочей программе.

Для расширения знаний по дисциплине рекомендуется использовать Интернет-ресурсы: проводить поиск в различных системах и использовать материалы сайтов, рекомендованных преподавателем на практических занятиях.

Методические рекомендации к практическим занятиям

Практическое занятие-это форма учебного занятия, где преподаватель организует детальное рассмотрение студентами отдельных теоретических положений учебной дисциплины и формирует умение и навыки их практического приложения путем индивидуального выполнения студентом в соответствии со сформулированными заданиями.

При подготовке к каждому практическому занятию студент должен выписать и выучить основные (новые) лексико-грамматические единицы по каждой теме.

При работе с текстом студент должен прочитать текст, проверить правильность чтения слов по словарю, перевести текст, выписать все незнакомые слова и выучить их наизусть, проанализировать текст и выбрать главные мысли (если необходимо подготовить пересказ или краткое изложение текста). Как правило, упражнения следует выполнять письменно в тетради.

Студенту следует регулярно повторять пройденный грамматический и лексический материал, пользуясь конспектами практических занятий, а также другими доступными источниками.

Основной целью практических занятий является закрепление и углубление знаний, полученных студентами при изучении данной дисциплины.

Составной частью подготовки к практическим занятиям является самостоятельная работа студентов, предполагающая изучение и анализ литературы и источников по рассматриваемым темам.

При наличии академических задолженностей по практическим занятиям, связанных с их пропусками преподаватель выдает задание студенту по пропущенной теме занятия.

Перечень обязательных видов работы студента:

- посещение практических занятий;
- ответы на теоретические вопросы на занятии;
- выполнение практических заданий на занятиях;
- выполнение тестов;
- выполнение домашних работ.

Методическое обеспечение инновационных форм учебных занятий

Метод проекта

Работа с проектами носит информационно-реферативный творческий характер. При работе над проектом студент или группа студентов (до 3 человек) выбирают сами тему проекта, руководствуясь своими интересами, но в рамках пройденного раздела дисциплины. Готовый проект выносится на обсуждение группы в виде презентации в MS Power Point.

Основной целью использования метода проектов является возможность в овладении учащимися коммуникативной компетенции, т.е. практическому овладению иностранным языком. Главной задачей является максимально грамотно и полно использовать пройденный лексический и грамматический материал раздела дисциплины в проекте, тем самым давая возможность студенту не только ознакомиться с новым материалом, но и закрепить его на практике.

При работе над проектом следует соблюдать определённый алгоритм действий:

1. определить тему.
2. разбить тему на более мелкие подтемы.
3. собрать информацию.
4. проанализировать и обсудить информации.
5. Систематизировать и подготовить презентацию, сформулировать общие выводы по теме.

Работа над проектом осуществляется под непосредственным руководством преподавателя.

Технология «мозгового штурма»

Технология «мозгового штурма» развивает творческое и ассоциативное мышление, благодаря чему, в памяти закрепляются изученные слова, выражения и исчезает проблема с языковым барьером. Часто эта технология используется при начале изучения новой темы или же для закрепления материала, при подготовке к созданию собственного монологического высказывания на определённую тему.

Пример темы: «Влияние Интернета, социальных сетей на отношения между людьми».

Каждому студенту предлагается назвать как можно больше идей, которые ассоциируются у него с этой темой. Рекомендуется все предлагаемые варианты записывать.

Следующий шаг - это проведение группового мозгового штурма, в ходе которого могут быть предложены дополнительные идеи. Затем все идеи обсуждаются и при необходимости сортируются. Затем студентам предлагается подготовить собственное монологическое высказывание на заданную тему. Студент имеет возможность из множества предложенных вариантов выбрать те, которые, по его мнению, являются наиболее рациональными. И даёт им обоснование.

Всё обсуждение проходит на иностранном языке. При необходимости преподаватель помогает устранить лексические трудности, корректируя речь студентов.

Ролевые и деловые игры

Ролевая игра-это эффективная отработка вариантов поведения в тех, ситуациях, в которых могут оказаться обучающиеся. Ролевые игры помогают осваивать языковой материал более эффективно.

Примерные задания:

Задание 1. Составьте диалог.

Работает группа из 3-х человек. Вы три друга. Необходимо выбрать одну из следующих ситуаций и представить её в виде диалога:

1. А хочет забрать его/её брата из аэропорта, но машина не заводится.
2. А нужно ехать на работу, но в этот день общественный транспорт не ходит. А не умеет водить машину.
3. А пообещал отвезти маму в театр, но на работе произошли непредвиденные обстоятельства и А не может отвезти маму в театр.

Схема диалога:

А: звонит Б и объясняет свою проблему.

Б: отказывается помочь и объясняет почему. Предлагает позвонить В. Звонит В и объясняет проблему.

В: Предлагает помочь. Звонит А. Объясняет как может помочь.

А: Благодарит В за помощь.

Задание 2. Составьте диалог.

Фирма, в которой вы работаете, вводит запрет на пользование мобильными телефонами и mp3 плеерами в офисе. Группа А: «за» запрет. Группа Б: «против» запрета. Нужно привести, по меньшей мере, 3 аргумента в поддержку вашей точки зрения. От лица фирмы выступает Директор.

Используйте в своих высказываниях следующие фразы:

giving opinion: I'd say... There's no harm in... It's important to...

speculate about the consequences: It might help us to... It'll cause...

Разбор конкретных ситуаций (кейс-метод)

Метод кейсов представляет собой изучение, анализ и принятие решений по ситуации, которая возникла в результате происшедших событий, реальных ситуаций или может возникнуть при определённых обстоятельствах в конкретной организации в тот или иной момент времени.

Студентам предлагается ситуация, которую они должны проанализировать и решить, используя изучаемый лексический материал, а также освоенные ранее устойчивые выражения и клише. Задания с разбором конкретных ситуаций обычно присутствуют в учебной литературе для данного курса.

Примерное задание

У вас есть изобретение/идея. Вам необходимо найти инвестора. Вы собираетесь на собеседование с инвестором, по поводу вашего изобретения. Студент А: Вы инвестор. Нужно узнать об изобретении у студента Б и решить, будете ли Вы инвестировать деньги в это изобретение или нет. Студент Б: у вас отличная идея/изобретение. Объясните суть идеи/изобретения и ответьте на вопросы инвестора. Ваша задача - убедить инвестора вложить деньги в Ваш проект.

Студентам предлагается проанализировать данную ситуацию и, используя лексическую базу изучаемой темы, а также освоенные ранее устойчивые выражения и клише, высказаться в данной ситуации.

Каждый студент получает карточку с деталями задания. Необходимо заполнить их своими данными: описать продукт, опыт и надежды на будущее. Затем студенты меняются ролями.

Дискуссии

Поскольку основной задачей при обучении иностранному языку является развитие коммуникативных навыков, то одним из наиболее продуктивных способов является метод дискуссий. Он подразумевает обмен мыслями, идеями, знаниями, суждениями, мнениями по поводу какого-либо спорного вопроса, проблемы. Такое свободное обсуждение позволяет обучающимся перешагивать языковой барьер, налаживать контакт с окружающими.

Часто этот метод целесообразно использовать до прочтения текста на заданную тематику или сразу после. Обучающимся предлагается ответить на ряд вопросов, связанных с темой обсуждения. Каждый учащийся учится высказывать свою точку зрения, аргументировать её, отстаивать, соглашаться или не соглашаться с другой точкой зрения на иностранном языке. Как правило, тематика дискуссий определяется рамками разделов дисциплины.

Применяемые образовательные технологии для различных видов учебных занятий и для контроля освоения обучающимися запланированных результатов обучения

В учебном процессе широко используются активные и интерактивные формы обучения. В сочетании с внеаудиторной работой это способствует формированию и развитию профессиональных навыков обучающихся.

При обучении иностранному языку используется интегрированный подход, который предусматривает различное сочетание подходов внутри одной программы. Это позволяет совмещать коммуникативный, тематический и профориентированный подходы, что дает возможность в короткие сроки получить базовые знания, одновременно отрабатывая их на профессиональной лексике. Так, коммуникативный подход направлен на развитие в первую очередь разговорных навыков и навыков восприятия речи на слух. Работа на занятии организуется в парном и групповом режимах. Слушателям предлагаются игровые ситуации, актуальные темы для обсуждения, аутентичные материалы для чтения и прослушивания. Тематический подход к обучению заключается в том, что слушатель совершенствует свои языковые навыки на базе текстов и лексики на определенную тему. Профориентированный подход предполагает использование специализированной профессионально ориентированной программы обучения английскому языку для специалистов, работающих в направлениях: финансы и банковское дело, логистика, медицина, авиация и т. д.

Перечень обязательных видов работы студента:

- посещение практических занятий;
- ответы на теоретические вопросы на занятии;
- выполнение практических заданий на занятиях;
- выполнение тестов;
- выполнение домашних работ;

Фонд оценочных средств для промежуточной аттестации по дисциплине

Для характеристики уровня усвоения учебного материала используются следующие обозначения:

- I – базовый;
- II – углубленный;

III – продвинутый (продуктивный) (планирование и самостоятельное выполнение деятельности, решение проблемных задач).

Методика формирования результирующей оценки базируется на учете результатов по пятибалльной шкале всех видов контроля. Результирующая средняя оценка корректируется результатами текущего контроля на практических занятиях, результатами промежуточного контроля, посещаемостью, результатами итогового тестирования. С этой оценкой студент выходит на итоговый контроль в форме зачёта с оценкой по всему курсу.

Промежуточная аттестация в итоговом семестре изучения дисциплины - зачёт с оценкой. Шкала оценивания – пятибалльная.

Промежуточная аттестация в 1-3 семестрах - зачет. Шкала оценивания – зачтено/не зачтено.

Для зачета:

Студент должен выполнить все виды текущего контроля, задания на зачете, учитывается также посещаемость занятий. В 1-ом семестре проводится собеседование по темам. Во 2-ом семестре студент должен также выполнить 2 итоговых задания: 1. Высказывание по заданной теме (беседа); 2. Высказывание по прочитанному тексту, ответы на вопросы преподавателя по прочитанному тексту. В 3-ем семестре проводится собеседование по темам.

Для зачёта с оценкой:

Студент должен выполнить все виды текущего контроля, задания на зачете с оценкой, учитывается также посещаемость занятий. На зачёте с оценкой проводится собеседование по темам. Результирующая оценка выставляется на основе подсчета среднеарифметического результата совокупности всех форм контроля, итогового тестирования и оценки на зачёте с оценкой.

Посещаемость занятий:

Студент должен посещать все занятия в рамках данного курса. Студент, пропустивший мероприятия по текущему контролю успеваемости по уважительной причине, должен предъявить преподавателю оправдательные документы (медицинскую справку, повестку в военкомат, повестку в суд и др.), которые учитываются при подведении итогов текущего контроля успеваемости.

Типовые контрольные задания и иные материалы, необходимые для оценки результатов обучения, характеризующие этапы формирования компетенции и (или) для итогового контроля сформированности компетенции

Mademoiselle Chanel

She's 14, American, and speaks no French at all. But six-foot-tall Kimora Lee Perkins is hot news in Paris, She has become the top model at the Parisian fashion house of Chanel.

When she was 11, her mother took her to a local modelling school. She thought modelling would be an interesting job because then she would be with other tall girls. She began to like it very much, and had to learn how to walk and pose to show off the clothes to their best advantage.

Chanel chose her because "she has the look of the 90s", and now she spends eight to ten hours a day modelling their latest fashions in various parts of the world. "I have to try really hard to keep looking good for the cameras," she said.

"People think it's a very easy job that anyone could do, but you need a lot of stamina," Kimora says. "Once, in London, we had to take photos in the street all through the night, and then I had to go to my tutor for school lessons at 9.00 am before taking the daytime photos at 1.00 pm.

She owes her remarkable looks to a Korean mother and a black father. But when she was young, back home in St. Louis, Missouri, she cried when she looked in the mirror and saw how tall she was. "I felt I was different from all the other kids my age," she explains. Her mother Joanne Perkins, 34, recalls. "Kimora was a tormented child. It was almost impossible for her to relate to other girls of her age, and there was a lot of teasing. Growing up was a very painful experience for her",

She is not only the youngest top model, she is also one of the richest. "Mom looks after that," Kimora explains, "I don't even have a credit card - I'm too young,"

What advice does she have for others? "You should go to a good modeling school, and you have to be prepared to work really hard and give your whole life to modeling".

Melek
 Female, 31
 I'm an architect.
 I'm from Turkey.
 I speak Turkish, English and a bit of German.
 I'm interested in music, football and cinema.
 I'd like to go to Cuba and Ireland.
 I want to learn languages.
 I live in a small house with my brother, Erkan. We have a nice living room with a big, comfortable sofa.
 My home town is Istanbul. It's beautiful and it has lots of things to see and do. We live near the centre.
 My family is very friendly. Erkan speaks English, too. My mother lives in the same street. She cooks dinner for us at the weekend.
 No smokers, please.
 Email me.

Fiona
 Female, 21
 I'm a music student.
 I'm from Ireland.
 I speak English and French.
 I'm interested in music, dance and meeting people from other cultures.
 I'd like to go to China, Sweden and the USA.
 I want to get a good job and learn salsa.
 I live in a flat on my own. It has a spare room with a spare bed, so friends often stay with me.
 My home town is Dublin. It's a great place and it has lots of nice cafés and clubs.
 My family lives in Galway, but my father often comes here for work. He stays with me and takes me to nice restaurants.

Read what João says and choose the correct words to complete the sentences below.

I come from Lisbon, but I'm a student in Coimbra. I study Economics at university, and I study English at evening classes. In summer, I work in a bar on the beach near Lisbon, and there are a lot of English-speaking tourists there. A lot of TV and films in Portugal are in English, too, so I watch them to help me learn. My English is OK, but I make some silly mistakes, for example You like football? instead of Do you like football? People understand me, but I like to get it right. And I sometimes make mistakes with negatives, too: I no like football instead of I don't like football. I think my pronunciation is OK, usually, but my spelling in English is bad!

3. Read the article about Jose Luis and Lawrence. Where do they live and work?

I live here but I work 800 kilometres away

Jose Luis Garcia, a father of four from Argentina, lives in a small village in the province of San Luis but works in Buenos Aires, 800 kilometres away.

"I grew up in my village and I love it here but the good jobs are in Buenos Aires," he says. "I have to travel for fourteen hours on the bus on Friday and Sunday nights but it's OK. I don't want to live in Buenos Aires. It's an exciting place but it's quite polluted and parts of it can be dangerous. The village is on the Chorrillos river, near the mountains. It's safe and quiet - a great place for my wife and kids."

There are more and more people like Jose Luis all over the world. Many people now live and work in very different places as cities become more expensive.

Lawrence Wood, an English businessman, works in London but lives in another country. He flies to London on Monday mornings and flies back to Malta on Thursday evenings, where his wife Samantha and two young children live in a family apartment in Paceville.

"Our new place in Malta is next to the sea, and bigger than our house in London," says Lawrence. "We have a beautiful view of the Mediterranean, it's five minutes from the kids' school and seven kilometres from the airport. The flying's OK. It's three or four hours but I only do it twice a week."

SO WHAT DO YOU DO ALL DAY?

Pete Chappell, 19, catering assistant, North Sea oil platform

Work 12 hours

I work 12 hours on, 12 hours off. Every day, I help prepare three meals - breakfast, lunch and dinner - for 300 people. I make ten different fresh salads, peel a 50kg bag of potatoes and wash up hundreds of dishes. I carry a lot of heavy boxes of food to the kitchen and it's very hot in there, so by the end of the day I'm very tired, but the time goes fast.

Me 1 hour

After work, I spend 45 minutes in the gym doing weight training. This helps build the strength you need for the job. Then I have a shower.

My evenings 3 hours

There's always a film to see in the platform's 'cinema'. This is in a small room, so only about 30 people can see a film. I go maybe twice a week. Everyone knows everyone else and it's good fun. We also spend a lot of time talking and some of the guys tell amazing stories. I'm learning a lot about life out here!

Sleep 7-8 hours

Last thing at night, I read in bed or chat with my roommate for around an hour. This is my time to relax. I need around seven hours' sleep a night, and I always sleep well because I'm so tired after my day's work.

Time off 2 weeks

We work on the platform for two weeks, then have two weeks off. Travelling home takes a whole day. It's great seeing my friends, but the time goes too fast. Next year, I'm planning to go to a catering college in Aberdeen and train to become a chef. I don't always want to work on an oil platform. It's too hard.

One-wheeled wonder
The unicycle is the real king of the road

Forget public transport. For computer programmer Joe Marshall, the daily journey to work across one of the most crowded cities in the world is fun. "It's like playing on the way to work," he says.

It takes Joe 50 minutes to travel the nine-mile journey across London by unicycle. That's about the same as it takes on the bus or the underground, and ten minutes quicker than by car. "Unicycles are slower than bikes," he says, "but they're the best thing in traffic jams because you can turn in a really small space. It's great exercise, too, because you can't stop moving. I have to jump up and down at traffic lights."

But aren't unicycles more dangerous than bikes? Marshall doesn't think so. "Unicycles are safer than they look and easier to ride," he says. "And drivers are more careful with me than with cyclists." Long-distance unicycling is more common than many people think. "Someone rode across America a few years ago," Marshall says. "That's the longest trip ever on a unicycle. And last year a group of people rode across Norway."

But what about all the looks you get? "You can't worry about what people think," he says. "Most of them are all right but I get a lot of comments, like 'Where's the other wheel?' A few days ago, an old lady came up to me and said, 'That's really stupid. Buy a car!'"

Help!

Belinda Ramos works for a large IT company and travels whenever she can. She's visited Belgium, Lebanon, England, France, Germany, Japan and Mexico. She'd love to go to Africa one day.

I was in the south of Japan at the time. One morning, I woke up in my hotel room, opened my eyes and looked around my room. The first thing I saw was a huge spider on the wall. It was about ten centimetres across. I hate spiders! I ran out of the room to the reception desk and shouted for help. "Kuma!" I remembered from my Japanese lessons that 'kuma' means 'spider'.

"Kuma?" the receptionist said.

"Kuma!" I shouted again. "In my room!"

"Kuma?"

"KUMA!!!"

The receptionist looked really frightened. She picked up the phone and said something quickly in Japanese. About a minute later - and I'm not joking - a policeman with a gun ran into the hotel and went into my room. For a minute there was silence but then we heard a laugh, so we went in. When the receptionist saw the spider on the wall, she started laughing too.

In Japanese, spider is 'kumo'. 'Kuma' means 'bear'.

Stay healthy in the workplace

Offices are not always healthy environments. Here are some tips for improving your office and your health.

- ✓ Try to sit near a window. Natural light makes you feel happier.
- ✓ Fresh air is good for you, so you should open the window if possible.
- ✓ If you want to improve the appearance of your office, get some plants.
- ✓ Get a good chair and make sure the top of your computer screen is at eye level. A bad sitting position can give you headaches and back pain.
- ✓ Don't sit near an air-conditioner. It dries out your eyes and skin.
- ✓ If you feel bored, change the colour of your office walls. The right colour improves your mood and helps you to be more creative. White, blue or green offices are better than dark or bright-coloured offices.
- ✓ Don't use the lift. You should always use the stairs. This keeps you fit.

Keep your brain in top condition

Your brain needs exercise in the same way as your body does. But using your brain doesn't need to be hard work. Have a look at these ideas.

Try writing backwards, or writing with your other hand. This makes new connections in your brain and helps you to get new ideas. The great thinker and artist Leonardo da Vinci often used mirror-writing.

Start using new parts of your brain. Take up new hobbies, like tennis, chess or dancing the tango.
Sleep. If you don't get enough sleep, it's harder for the brain to do some activities, like producing language and new ideas.

Chew gum. This exercises the hippocampus, a part of the brain that's important for making new memories.

Ask your brain to do old activities in new ways. For example, when you're on a train or bus, close your eyes and guess where you are by listening.

Don't eat too much junk food. Cholesterol is bad for both your heart and your brain.

Think young! Experiments have shown that when people start to believe they're old, they act old.

Play memory games. This keeps your brain young. Games like remembering long lists of words can take ten to fourteen years off the mental age of older people.

Learn a new language. This is one of the most difficult things your brain can do, so it's great exercise. It's good for your brain's frontal lobes, which usually get smaller with age.

Eat lots of fish. The omega 3 oils in fish like salmon and tuna are good for the brain.

Get enough exercise. The right amount of exercise can give people 30% less chance of developing Alzheimer's.

Relax. Too much stress is bad for the brain. The hippocampus is about 14% smaller in people who are always stressed.

Interviewer: So, Ruben, how did you get into the luge?

Ruben: Well, at school, I couldn't jump high or run fast. I played football but I wasn't very good. It was really sad! But when I was ten, I saw the Olympics on TV for the first time and I loved it. And later, when I was 21, I saw Scott Hamilton win an Olympic medal in figure skating. Scott's about 155 cm tall and weighs about 50 kilos, and he gave me hope. I thought: if that little guy can do it, I can do it too. So I decided to be an Olympic champion but I had to find a sport. It's true, I'm not a great athlete, but I never give up. I try again and again. So I chose the luge because people get hurt a lot, people often break bones - ninety percent of them give up. And I thought, well, I don't give up, so I have a chance.

Interviewer: Most Olympic luge athletes start training at 12. You started at 21, but you've competed in three Olympics.

Ruben: Yes, I started in 1984. I went to the Winter Olympics in Calgary in 1988 and in Albertville in 1992. Then, nearly ten years later, my old coach phoned me up and said "Argentina needs you!" So at age 39, I competed in the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

Interviewer: What's it like to luge down a mountain at 90 miles an hour?

Ruben: Well, at that speed, you don't have time to think. The luge is very sensitive. If you hiccup, you can crash. And when you finish, you have to sit up and stop the luge by putting your feet on the ice. It takes a couple of hundred metres to stop because you finish the run at about 80 miles an hour. I still practise on the luge sometimes and I'm frightened on every run.

Interviewer: And what do you do these days?

Ruben: I'm a motivational speaker. I talk about my experiences and how to be successful. I'm making a film about success at the moment. We're interviewing a lot of business people, philosophers, athletes, Hollywood people. It's very interesting.

In defence of supermarkets

I like supermarkets. I can buy a week's shopping in ninety minutes, giving me time to help my daughter with her homework, or read a good book in the bath.

Supermarkets sell an amazing choice of fresh and frozen food. If I want to spend hours cooking a three-course dinner for friends, I can find all the ingredients I need at my local supermarket. If I choose an Italian meal, there are porcini mushrooms, fresh basil and mozzarella cheese. If I want some other cuisine - Indian, Chinese or French - herbs, spices, sauces and vegetables from every continent are only a few minutes away.

On the other hand, when I'm tired and just want to put together a quick family meal, I can buy a ready-made lasagne or curry, a bag of salad and some fresh fruit - and start eating it ten minutes after I get home.

Thanks to supermarkets, I can now shop all day from early morning to late at night. In some stores I can even shop 24 hours.

When I was a child, my mother didn't have these choices, as she went to three or four depressing little shops every day to buy what she needed. These shops opened from 9 am to 5 pm Monday to Saturday, and they all closed on Thursday afternoons.

The food was not always good, there was almost no choice and the shopkeepers were not very friendly. And at that time, food was very expensive. Cream on strawberries was a luxury, and roast chicken was for special occasions only.

Not many people would say that shopping in their local supermarket on a crowded Saturday morning makes them happy. But it's much, much better than what we had before.

During rush hour, a Canadian man and his teenage son got in the cab and asked me to take them to La Guardia airport. They were going back to Canada. We had a nice conversation together and when they got out, they gave me a good tip.

When my next passenger got in, he handed me a wallet and said he found it on the back seat. I immediately knew it belonged to the Canadian man. It contained a driving license and a credit card, nothing much else.

Now, I liked the Canadian guy, so I found the 800 number on the back of the credit card and phoned the company. I explained what happened and gave them my number. After about half an hour, the Canadian guy called and asked me to go back to the airport and return the wallet. So I turned off my cab light and I started for the airport. Five or six people tried to stop me as I was driving through the city, but I didn't stop. I was doing a good thing!

Forty minutes later, I arrived at La Guardia. The guy was standing outside the terminal building and looking pretty stressed. I gave back the wallet and told him that I only did a little shopping with his credit card! Just a joke. He was so happy, he just laughed. "You're my favourite New Yorker ever", he said. Then he handed me fifty dollars and ran back into the airport. The whole thing – plus the fifty dollars! – really made my night.

A new kind of banking?

- ◆ In 1976, Muhammed Yunus, a Bangladeshi professor of economics, started Grameen Bank. Grameen gives small loans – usually no more than US$100 – to very poor people who can't get credit from normal banks. This kind of credit is called microcredit.
- ◆ Most of Grameen's customers live in villages in the Bangladeshi countryside. 97 percent of them are women. They use the credit to start small businesses and make money for their families. For example, they make furniture, repair clothes, or buy animals for milk.
- ◆ Customers usually have to make repayments every week for twelve months. They pay about 16 percent interest a year. Grameen says that 98 percent of its customers make all their repayments.
- ◆ People who want a loan from Grameen have to make groups of five people, called loan circles. The people in the circle meet regularly to talk about their ideas and help each other. If someone in the group doesn't make their repayments, no one in the group can get credit in the future. However, if everyone makes their repayments, they can get bigger loans.
- ◆ In 2007, Grameen Bank had over seven million customers in nearly eighty thousand villages. There are now more than seven thousand other microcredit organisations around the world, including in Europe and the United States.
- ◆ Professor Yunus and Grameen Bank won the Nobel Peace Prize in December 2006.

The treadmill

When Manuel Pedro's daughter looked at him one morning and said "Wow, you're fat!", he knew it was time to lose some weight. The trouble was, he didn't have time to do any exercise.

"I work in an office all day and when I get home in the evening, I generally just want to sit down and relax. At the weekend I normally do things with my kids, so I just don't have time to go to the gym or go for a run."

However, one day, his wife suggested buying a treadmill and walking on it while he worked.

"I thought she was crazy at first," he says. "But then I thought, why not?"

So the forty-year-old bought a cheap treadmill and put it in the corner of his office. He fixed his laptop to it and began walking and working at the same time.

"At first, I found it hard to type and walk at the same time. I got really stressed and sometimes only did it once or twice a week. I also looked really stupid in a shirt and tie on a treadmill. My colleagues thought it was really funny."

However, soon Manuel got better at working while he walked, and started to feel healthier. After a while he was doing several hours' walking every morning.

"I have a lot more energy now," says the office manager. "When I get to the office, I get straight on the treadmill and check my emails. I do three hours a day at the moment. Every week I do ten minutes' more walking. I've lost a lot of weight. My wife can't stop smiling."

Viewpoint - The urban world in 2050

In 1900, just 13 per cent of the world's people lived in cities. In 2008, the number passed 50 per cent for the first time in history. By 2050, the number will be about 70 per cent. The urban population in Asia and Africa will double, and there will be nearly 30 "megacities" - cities with more than 10 million people. So what will life be like for people in the cities of the future? Professor of human geography Ben Rhodes describes his vision of the urban world in 2050.

Life in cities will be very different from how it is today. Energy, especially oil, will be very expensive, so many people will probably work at home, or have their workplaces close to where they live. There'll be less traffic on the roads, and it'll be easier for people to be close to their families. For these reasons cities won't have just one centre where everyone goes to work and shop. Instead, we'll probably see cities with many different centres.

It will be difficult to provide enough water, gas and electricity for really big cities, so these will probably stop growing. Many people from the countryside will move to smaller cities of 500,000 people or less. Transport over long distances will be a lot more expensive than it is now, so people will have to use food and energy from the countryside around their cities. They'll use local materials for building, and perhaps traditional styles of architecture too.

The thing I really worry about is that energy may become too expensive for many people. In the end we might have two groups of people: a rich group which can afford energy and lives in clean, green areas, and a bigger, poorer group which can't afford it and has to live in the more polluted parts of the city. This might lead to serious political problems.

As we all know, cities near the sea will probably experience some extra problems. As temperatures around the world go up, sea levels will rise and many places will have problems with flooding. Some cities will be OK, some may even find that the change in the climate is good for them, but others will need help. We really need to start planning for this now.

Complete the tourist's questions in the tourist office. Use the expressions in bold from Exercise 9.

- TOURIST OFFICER Hello, can I help you?
- TOURIST Yes, I've just arrived, and ¹ the bed and breakfast I booked online. ² _____ a map?
- TOURIST OFFICER Yes, here you are. We're here, in the main square.
- TOURIST OK, thanks. And ³ _____ the museums or other things to see?
- TOURIST OFFICER Right, here's a leaflet about all the museums and galleries, but it's a nice city just to walk around.
- TOURIST ⁴ _____ any city tours?
- TOURIST OFFICER There's a walking tour in English tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, starting from here. Or there's a bus tour that goes all day.
- TOURIST ⁵ _____ tickets for that?
- TOURIST OFFICER No, you can just pay the bus driver.
- TOURIST Great. One last question – ⁶ _____ a cheap restaurant near here?
- TOURIST OFFICER There's a pizzeria just across the square, or you'll find lots of cafés and fast-food places all along this road here.
- TOURIST OK. Thanks very much.

Why do people laugh?

Babies start laughing very soon after they're born. Deaf and blind people can laugh even though they've never seen or heard anyone laughing. Laughing seems to be a part of human nature, but what's it for?

Many people think that we laugh because we see or hear something funny, but most of the time this isn't true. In one study, a professor of psychology and his students listened in and made notes on hundreds of conversations in public places. They heard about 1,200 laughs, but only 10-20 percent came after a joke or something funny. The other 80-90 percent followed normal, everyday expressions like, "I'll see you later" or, "It was nice to meet you".

No one really knows why we laugh, but one idea is that the most important reason for laughing is to make other people feel good. When you laugh, the people around you often start laughing too. Soon, the whole group is cheerful and relaxed. Laughter can stop negative feelings and help people to feel closer to each other. It may be that thousands of years ago, before people could speak, laughter helped them to form groups and work together.

It also seems that laughter can be good for your health. Laughing a hundred times uses the same energy as riding on an exercise bike for fifteen minutes. The writer Norman Cousins, who suffers from back pain, wrote that watching comedy programmes on TV helped him to feel better. He said that ten minutes of laughter gave him two hours of pain-free sleep.

Le Corbusier - architect of the future?

To some people, he is the father of a million ugly tower blocks, shopping centres and multi-storey car parks. To others, he was a genius, a man who dreamed of safe and comfortable cities for everyone, rich or poor. His name was Le Corbusier and his buildings can be seen in Europe, North and South America and Asia.

Le Corbusier saw concrete and tower blocks as a way of providing inexpensive, quiet and spacious homes for everyone. He thought tower blocks should have their own indoor 'streets' with shops, cafes, schools and sports centres, and be close to historic city centres.

Le Corbusier used these ideas in one of his most famous designs, the twelve-storey Unite d'habitation in Marseille, built in 1952. Today, the tower block is home to 1,600 people. It's a popular address and neighbours get on well. It has an indoor shopping street, social clubs, a kindergarten, a gym and a hotel. There is even a swimming pool and a rooftop garden.

However, perhaps the best example of Le Corbusier's vision for modern urban living is in India, 250 km north of Delhi. There, he built one of the world's most unusual cities, Chandigarh. It is set around a large man-made lake and is full of parks, trees and flowers. It has 46 areas, each with its own apartment blocks, shops and services. One resident, Ranjit Sehgal, says, "Chandigarh was for many a dream in the desert, a new beginning. People are terribly proud of being from Chandigarh."

However, there is another side to the story. Other architects tried to use Le Corbusier's ideas, but their tower blocks were sometimes very different. They were cheaply built with small, dark apartments and paper-thin walls. They were built far from city centres, with no indoor shops or streets. Some writers on urbanisation believe tower blocks like these create social problems, like crime and violence, and they blame Le Corbusier for the problems of modern city life.

Laurent Bouvier, an expert on the architect, disagrees. "With more than half the world's population now living in cities," he says, "it's time to look at Le Corbusier's work again. His ideas were misunderstood in the 20th century, but they may be the answer to the problems of the 21st."

Can you believe what you read?

When Mike Scott, a singer, read the page about himself on Wikipedia.com, he noticed several facts were wrong. So he started correcting them online. When he got to the end of the page, he looked up and saw that the information at the top of the page was changing back again. He couldn't believe his eyes.

He wrote about it in his blog and minutes later, he got a message from a complete stranger. The person explained that he was a big fan of Mike Scott and maintained the Mike Scott Wikipedia page. He checked the page regularly and if any facts changed, he immediately changed them back.

Today, anyone can write a blog or an article online. Wikipedia, where anyone can post or change an entry, has become a popular way to do research. But is it a good place to get reliable facts? In recent years, many people, like Mike Scott, have found that their online biographies contain inaccurate information. Terry Millstone, a web-based journalist, says, "Wikipedia seems like a really great idea but actually it's quite a dangerous website. People call this the great internet age, but there's never been a worse time to get accurate information." Not everyone agrees with this view. Pete Morley, another journalist, says, "People criticise Wikipedia because they're afraid of it. There's no other source of information which is so up-to-date and free."

So, is it a better idea to place our trust in what we read in magazines, newspapers and books? There have been a number of scandals in the publishing world over the years, but one of the most extreme was the story of Stephen Glass. At only 25, he was a celebrated journalist working for the highly respected US political magazine, The New Republic. All that ended in May 1998 when it was discovered that one of Glass's biggest articles was a fake. Later, it was found that Glass had made up facts in 27 of the 41 articles he wrote for the magazine.

So, how do we know what to believe? Words have always had the power to influence people and, rightly or wrongly, we tend to trust the printed word. But with the rise of the Internet, that trust is at greater risk than ever.

I'm from England originally, but I live in Spain with my husband, Ramon. We run a riding school near Bilbao. When I first came here about twenty years ago, I had to learn Spanish fast, as I hardly ever saw or heard English. All films and TV programmes were dubbed in Spanish, there was just one bookshop that had a few, very expensive English books, and I occasionally found an English newspaper or magazine at the station. Now it's totally different - we have a satellite so I can watch English and American TV, films on DVD have the original language, and of course the Internet is brilliant for online papers, radio, podcasts, video clips ... everything! And if I want to read an English book, it's quick and cheap to order online. Brilliant! My kids really enjoy their English lessons, too - their teachers often use stuff from the Internet in class. There's never been a better time to learn English, I think.

Could social networking sites mean the end of lasting friendships?

A generation that is growing up using social networking websites, such as Facebook and MySpace, is less likely to form lasting relationships and is more likely to act without thinking, an expert has warned.

Many people who were born in 1990 or later have only known a world with the Internet, so they could grow up with an unrealistic view of the world and themselves, the annual meeting of the Royal College of Psychiatrists heard.

Dr Himanshu Tyagi, a psychiatrist, said social networking sites have encouraged the idea that friendships and relationships can be formed and ended quickly and easily. He said, "It's a world where everything moves fast and changes all the time, where relationships are ended at the click of a mouse. Online, you can delete your profile and change who you are in a few seconds." He said that because everything happens so quickly on social networking sites, people may start to find the real world boring.

He said teenagers who socialise online are more likely to make quick decisions without thinking about the consequences of their actions. They might not pay enough attention to their 'real world' selves, and might find it difficult to form relationships in the real world because they won't learn about body language, tone of voice and facial expressions online. He said that if you can't see someone's face or body language or hear the changes in their voice, this will influence your understanding of what's going on. He added that friendship means something very different to the 'internet generation'.

But there are also benefits. When you're online, you often don't know the wealth, race or gender of the person you're communicating with. Dr Tyagi said, "No one is an outsider on the net. It may not be the best way to make lasting friendships, but it does make everyone equal."

Hi

I'm Mette. I'm a 25-year-old Norwegian female. I'm living in Oslo, but originally I'm from a small town ... located somewhere near the Arctic circle.

I'm working in a company that provides telecommunications solutions (I'm in 'a man's world'). Search, analysis, development ... I really like my job! Yes, I admit I don't think so when the alarm clock's ringing at 7 a.m., and I'm looking for it to turn it off :))

The official company language is English, but my colleagues are Norwegian and Belgian guys. And I noticed recently that my English started narrowing so all I said was 'it's done, it's updated, it works fine now' and other job-specific terms. So your website is a ray of light! I feel more confident now with my English. Thank you a lot!

I like hanging with my friends, attending photo exhibitions (the last one was Anton Corbin), going to a movie. A bit of sport activity: swimming, pilates. I'm also learning French (as I lived in Belgium for 1 year and my Belgian friends test my French from time to time). And like I said, I love my work, but I'll probably try and find a job in the UK or France in the future, so my languages need to be good.

Mr Song and Dance Man

Karaoke is a $10 billion-a-year industry, but the man who invented it has made almost no money out of it. Inoue Daisuke came up with the idea in 1971. He could have become one of the richest men in Japan, but he didn't patent his idea and doesn't seem worried about the lost opportunity. 'I took a car stereo, a coin box and a small amplifier to make the karaoke,' says the 65-year-old in his small office in Osaka. 'Who would consider patenting something like that?'

In the early 1970s, Inoue was a drummer in a bar band with six colleagues, playing in local clubs in Kobe. They played for middle-aged businessmen who wanted to sing traditional Japanese songs. Inoue says, 'Out of 108 club musicians in Kobe, I was the worst! And the clients in my club were the worst singers!'

One day, one of his clients asked Inoue to play for him on an overnight trip. Inoue, unable to leave his job, gave him a tape of the backing music instead. That night, the businessman gave an emotional performance and karaoke (meaning 'empty orchestra') was born.

Inspired by this success, Inoue made 11 boxes with tapes and amplifiers, and began renting them to bars in Kobe in 1971. His plan was to make a bit of money but he never thought the idea would be so popular. In fact, karaoke was soon picked up by larger companies and through the 1980s and 1990s, it swept across Asia, the US and Europe. Then in 1999, Time Magazine called Inoue one of the 20th century's most influential people, saying he had completely changed nightlife. 'Nobody was as surprised as me,' he says.

Inoue himself only used a karaoke machine for the first time to celebrate his 59th birthday. These days, he makes a living selling a cockroach repellent for the machines. 'Cockroaches get inside the machines, build nests and eat the wires,' he says. He's very excited about his next venture. "My dream," he says, 'is to train Japanese pet-owners to take better care of their pets.' Friends say he is the ideas man, while his wife, who works in the same Osaka office, helps bring the ideas to life.

Why so clumsy?

What makes one person have more accidents than another? Most people would say that it's to do with taking risks. Take fewer risks and you'll have fewer accidents. But is taking risks really a matter of choice?

Some experts believe that whether or not you take risks in life has a lot to do with your upbringing and, some believe, with your birth order. Parents are often stricter and more careful with their first child, and so first-born children tend to grow up taking fewer risks and being more cautious. Parents are often more relaxed with a second or third child, so these children tend to take more risks.

But why do children tend to be more accident-prone than adults? During childhood and adolescence, the body grows very quickly. There seem to be periods in these years when our brain and body are at different stages of development. Our arms are longer than the brain thinks they are, so we knock things over; our legs are longer than the brain believes, so we trip over easily.

Another explanation has been offered by scientists in Spain who have found a possible link between the number of hours a child watches TV and how accident-prone they are. The research suggests that the more time a child spends watching TV, the less they are developing their physical co-ordination skills. If a child doesn't run around a lot, they don't begin to understand that the world is full of physical risk. Watching cartoons and action adventure films doesn't help either. It gives the child a false sense of how the world works and of how much danger it contains.

So, what about adults? Some studies have shown that left-handed people are more accident-prone than right-handed people. Why the difference? No one knows for sure. One theory is that we live in a right-handed world. Everything from cars to door handles, from children's toys to engineering tools and equipment - is made by right-handed people for right-handed people. So left-handed children and adults are more likely to have accidents because the modern world is not designed for them.

True Story competition

Here are the two winners of our True Story competition, judged by you, the reader. You had to tell us the story of how you met your partner in no more than five hundred words. Here are the two stories from our winners, Hans Klinsman from Germany and Maggie Renbourne from Ireland.

I first met Chin Mae when she came to Bonn thirty years ago. She was only supposed to be in Germany for two weeks, but then she met me and we fell in love. We were going to get married, but then she had to go back to Korea for family reasons. I couldn't go with her and I'm not a good letter-writer, so in the end, we lost touch. I couldn't forget her, though. Some years later, I realised there was no way that I was going to be happy with any other woman. I had to try and find Chin Mae. So I wrote a letter and sent it to her last address - her parents' home. I didn't get a reply, which was no surprise really. I thought there was no chance that she'd still be single. She probably had a husband and children. So I tried to get on with my life.

It was three months ago - January 7th, 7.00 in the morning - when I was woken by the phone ringing. I'd been dreaming, and in my dream the phone was ringing and it was Chin Mae, trying to contact me. I'd had that dream many times over the years. When I eventually picked the phone up, I heard Chin Mae's voice. Of course I thought I was still dreaming, but this time it really was her. She said she never got my letter; her parents forgot to give it to her. Just recently, she was helping her mother move home and she found it. It had fallen behind a bookcase and it had been there for over twenty years! As soon as she read it, she knew she had to try to find me. I'd moved home, but luckily, I'd kept the same telephone number.

I immediately flew to Seoul and Chin Mae met me at the airport. It was a wonderful moment. She hadn't changed a bit. I'm so glad my letter ended up where it was supposed to be. I'm fifty this year, and I've just married the woman I've always loved.

I wish people would take more notice of ...

The importance of art in society. We need to have more support from the government. Not just in the UK-everywhere.

The most surprising thing that happened to me was ...

When my father went to jail. That was very surprising.

I'm good at ...

Learning things quickly, especially movement. And I can remember things for a long time.

I'm very bad at ...

Art. I can't paint or draw. I just don't have any talent.

The ideal night out is ...

Time spent with normal people, just having a good time and learning.

You know me as a dancer but in another life I'd have been ...

A musician or a sportsman. I wanted to be a footballer when I was a child.

The best age to be is ...

Now. I'm mature but I still have youth - it's a good balance.

In weak moments I ...

Just have to have faith in myself and trust the people around me.

in a nutshell, my philosophy is this:

Do whatever makes you happy, however you want it. Because life is special.

Declutter your life!

Clutter. Rubbish. Stuff. Call it what like, we've all got so much of it, we're drowning in it. It gradually takes our houses and our lives. All this stuff has become a huge source of stress today, affecting everything from our lifestyle choices to our personal development.

Decluttering - clearing out all that clutter and living a cleaner, simpler life - is becoming increasingly popular.

Don Aslett is a cleaning specialist. He believes that we're addicted to stuff. "By the time we become adults, we believe that things make us happy," he says. "If one little thing gives us pleasure, then surely more things will increase our pleasure. And we think things can change us, make us better. For instance, 'the kids won't do their homework - I'm sure it'll help if we buy a computer' or 'I'm unpopular - a new shampoo should help.' "He believes that we buy things to solve all the problems in our lives, and so we keep getting more stuff. And of course, we're wrong.

Michelle Passoff makes her living from other people's clutter - she's a 'clutter consultant' and author of Lighten Up! Free Yourself From Clutter. "A long time ago, I noticed that when something big happened in my life, I would go on a cleaning binge: I'd tidy up the front room; I'd put the kids' toys away in their cupboards; I'd clean up the kitchen." She found that cleaning helped her feel less stressed about the big problems in her life. "But then one day I had a thought: suppose I did it the other way around. If I had a big clear-out, would big things happen in my life?" She found that they did. She found that, without so many possessions, she could concentrate on the important things in her life, like relationships with friends and colleagues.

Do you hoard things and never throw them away? Go on, declutter your life.

In my neighbourhood, there's one day a month when you can put old furniture and stuff you don't want out on the street. I think it's good to give away stuff you don't need any more.

Manuel, Brazil

I don't agree with these people. My wife and I enjoy buying new things and we're perfectly normal. We have two happy and healthy kids. When you're happy, the things around you have happy memories, so you want to keep them.

Roger, UK

Every year, when the weather starts to improve, we give the house a good clean and get rid of a lot of our old stuff. It's not much fun but it does feel good when you've done it. So maybe they have a point, but the idea of a 'clutter consultant' is ridiculous.

13. Answer the questions.

- 1 What happens if the girl picks a stone?
- 2 What happens if she refuses to pick a stone?

Lesson in Lateral Thinking: The Story of Two Stones

Many years ago in a small village, a farmer owed a large sum of money to a moneylender. The moneylender, who was old and ugly, liked the farmer's beautiful daughter. So he said he would forget the farmer's debt if he could marry his daughter. Both the farmer and his daughter were horrified by the proposal. So the clever moneylender suggested that they let chance decide. He told them that he would put a black stone and a white stone into an empty bag. Then the girl would have to pick one stone from the bag.

- 1) If she picked the black stone, she would have to marry the moneylender and her father's debt would be cancelled.
- 2) If she picked the white stone, she would not have to marry him and her father's debt would still be cancelled.
- 3) If she refused to pick a stone, her father would have to go to prison.

They were standing on a path in the farmer's field, full of stones. The moneylender bent down and picked up two stones. As he picked them up, the sharp-eyed girl noticed that he had picked up two black stones and put them into the bag. He then asked the girl to pick a stone from the bag.

Now, what would you do if you were the girl? If you had to advise her, what would you tell her? Careful analysis would produce three possibilities:

- 1) The girl could refuse to take a stone.
- 2) The girl could show the two black stones in the bag and expose the moneylender's dishonesty.
- 3) The girl could pick a black stone and marry the old man to save her father.

The girl's dilemma cannot be solved with traditional logical thinking.

The problem with witnesses

The honesty of witnesses is the basis for the judicial process in many countries around the world. But research has shown that you can't always rely on these witnesses to give an accurate account of events.

Several studies have shown that people frequently not only forget the details of things that happened but also remember things that didn't happen at all. In one study, people were shown a picture of a car accident. Later, some were asked what they saw when the cars 'hit' each other, while others were asked what they saw when the cars 'smashed' into each other. People who were questioned using the word 'smashed' were more likely to recall seeing broken glass in the original picture. The introduction of false information changes people's memories. It can make us believe something that didn't happen or exist.

The problem is made worse by the effect of telling a story on our memory. When we tell a story, we always have a particular audience, so we change certain details. When we tell a friend about our day, for example, we want to make it interesting so we might exaggerate some things and leave out boring details. And every time we tell the story, our memory of it changes. In court, once witnesses have given an account of an event, they tend to remember what they said in their account rather than the actual event. Even more worryingly, once a witness has identified a person as guilty, he is likely to identify that same person later on, even when the person identified is not actually guilty.

How to set yourself on fire

My stunt career started in 1961. There was no training in those days. I was a black belt in judo, and went down to teach an actor in a big film. That's how I got into it.

When you do a fire stunt, you put a special gel on your skin, and then you wear a fireproof suit under your clothes. Your clothes are set on fire and normally stay alight for about 15 seconds. Fire goes upwards so it's always up around your face and the back of your neck. If it starts to hurt, then you're in trouble.

It does get very hot, and you have to do it with two or three people ready around you, so if you have a problem you can fall down on your hands and knees and they will put you out using fire extinguishers, spraying you headfirst all the way down to your feet. Then they wrap a big wet towel around you because sometimes you're so hot that you can re-ignite. You're in control and you know that if you've had enough, or if it gets too hot, you can just lie flat down and they will put the fire out. If you're going to do a longer fire-burn, you need some breathing apparatus, so you wear small bottles called 'breathers' inside your suit so you can last a bit longer. The air gets burnt around you during a fire stunt, using up the oxygen.

Over the years, I've done about nine or ten fire jobs. They're special, not an everyday occurrence in a stuntman's career. You might have to do one every couple of years. For my first fire job, I was very anxious - and very pleased when everything was all right. It was in a film called The Last Valley, where I was set on fire and thrown onto a bonfire - a full body burn. I had a very nasty accident while filming Michael Winner's Death Wish 3 in 1985, when I was seriously injured due to a mistake by the crew. It was a big fire job, jumping out of an exploding building, and I got badly burnt because I wasn't actually supposed to be on fire.

My family are always anxious and want to make sure I'm all right. I have to phone them before and after a job so they know I'm OK. They never try to talk me out of it after all, I've been doing it for over 40 years. Anyway, I'm now a stunt co-ordinator, so I don't do as many stunts. It's a young man's job being a stuntman.

Doing a Ratner

Gerald Ratner will never get over his big mistake. In 1991, the then-head of the hugely successful Ratners Jewellers experienced one of the speediest downfalls in corporate history. While making a speech to the Institute of Directors, he said some of his products were rubbish and made a joke that his customers could buy "a pair of earrings for under a pound, which is cheaper than a prawn sandwich, but probably wouldn't last as long". Share prices fell dramatically and he was fired from the family business he'd started working for at 16, taken over from his father and built up into a global success. He went bankrupt and had a nervous breakdown. The experience still hurts. "I did offer to resign within 48 hours of that speech," he says, adding, "And I wish now I had, rather than stay around for another 18 months for everything to fall apart."

Since then, he has struggled to make a comeback. He set up a health club in 1996 and made a good profit when he sold it five years later. He then set up an online jewellery business called Gerald Online (he was not allowed to use the name Ratners). He runs the business with only six people, compared with the 27,000 employed at his old company.

"I do a lot more things myself," he says. He also spends two nights a week giving speeches at business events and he has written an autobiography, sales of which have been "not great".

Ratner is philosophical about his past, saying, "I made a huge mistake, which I regret, and I have to live with that fact. The good thing was I got into the habit of cycling 28 miles per day." When asked how he would like to be remembered, he says, "I know I'll be remembered, sadly, as 'doing a Ratner' - an expression which became widely used for making big mistakes in business. "But what people forget is that before that speech, we had transformed a small family company into a global business. That's how I'd like 'a Ratner' to be remembered."

At 60, though, Ratner is back in business and excited about the future. He says, "People often ask me, 'Why didn't you write a book before?' And I reply, 'Because it wouldn't have had a happy ending.'"

Genetic engineering for athletes

Cyclist Alain Such has been suspended from the Ingotel cycling team for two years after a positive drugs test at the Institute of Drug Free Sport. "I am still in shock," said Didier Garcia, from Team Ingotel. "Alain joined our team last month and we had no idea that he was being investigated."

It's a story that has become more and more familiar in recent years, with the list of illegal drugs becoming longer and athletes continuing to look for legal and illegal ways to improve their performance. So it's no surprise to find that scientists are considering the possibility of using genetic engineering to further develop athletes' abilities. Dr Mohammad Farnood, a leading sports scientist from Cairo, Egypt, said: "It is thought that some athletes will look for other ways to improve performance apart from using drugs."

The use of drugs in sport has not always been illegal. In the Olympics in 1904, Thomas Hicks won the marathon after receiving an injection of strychnine (and some brandy) in the middle of the race. In fact, the first dose didn't revive him for long, so he was given another and, as a result, he collapsed soon after finishing. Another dose may well have killed him. Things are very different today. Drug tests and bans for athletes are becoming more and more frequent and some academics believe athletes may turn to genetic enhancement. "If genetics can improve performance with no risk of discovery," said Dr Farnood, "then it's likely to become common practice for athletes."

So, how would it work? Researchers are looking at the possibility of identifying 'athletic' genes and correcting weak ones. Put into practice, this would make a person healthier and, potentially, more capable of being athletic. Once scientists understand what the genes of top athletes look like, it might even become possible to identify 'athletic' genes in young people, and then money could be invested in children who have the most promising genes.

The fact that WADA (the World Anti-Doping Agency) is taking it seriously shows that genetic engineering in sport could become a major problem. However, there is another view in the genetic engineering debate.

"People are beginning to recognise that genetics can be used in many ways to benefit society, for instance in saving lives and in creating better-quality food for more people," Dr Farnood says. "Sport is only one example. So, those who offer themselves to be genetically engineered may be considered - in one sense - to be helping science and technology to move forward. Is it fair to use genetic engineering in sport? You could ask if it's fair for some runners to use the latest scientifically developed footwear. The key question is whether it's available to everyone."
